Cheski to promote them on a wider basis. So to complement the standard school courses, Abderry offers holiday accommodation for horses, and the training facilities can be hired.

As plans for Abderry unfold, Cheski is steering the facility towards her vision of a Centre for Equine Excellence, set in the heart of Franklin, with an Equine Health and Fitness Centre scheduled to open within a year.

Her passion for the project matches her passion for horses – and all they can teach her. She acknowledges that working with horses is a lifestyle choice. “It’s not a glamorous job,” she concedes, “but there are huge lessons in life to be learned. As we develop an understanding of the animals we come to better understand other human beings – and we get to know ourselves better too.”

Courses for horses – and humans?
